

What Digital Approaches Can Do for the Study of Intertextuality

Neil Coffee
(University at Buffalo)

This presentation surveys the state of digital intertextual research in classics in order to sketch a unifying agenda for further work. For those working on intertextuality, it can fill gaps in their knowledge and provide common goals to strive toward. For others, it can serve to introduce approaches they can use.